Ate no Washitsu

DIY Japanese space

This "Ate" Japanese room can be easily set up or taken down for your enjoyment of the "WA".

In Noto hanto island of Ishikawa prefecture in JAPAN, especially urushigaitomachi, "Wajima" being the birth place of wajima nuri, Noto Viva provincial timber is often used in building material naturally. The pillars, thresholds, lintels, sidings and walls are painted by raw urushi lacquer 4-5 times for majority of the houses here.

"Ate" is Noto Viva provincial timber, ever green tall tree. It is 20-30m tall with its leaves dark green in color all year around.

Noto Viva provincial timber consists of hinokitiol which has high sterilizing power and termites repelling effect. It is hard to perish/decay, can endure humidity so often used for foundation, pillars, around eaves and balconies.

You can sit on the tatami matt, sip on Green tea, lie down smelling the "igusa" herb ...and enjoy the special DIY Japanese space.

Please enjoy the peaceful harmony of the wood, lacquer, washi and tatami.

Warning : tatami matts, urushi lacquer painting on outer frame has odor and some may have allergic reaction to the urushi lacquer.
